ABOUT THE COLLOQUIUM

OVERVIEW

The ICPC will be holding its 12th International Colloquium from November 6 to 8 2017 in Montreal. Consequent to its mission to promote crime prevention as a way to ensure community safety and overall increased quality of life for all, the ICPC has hosted similar colloquiums every two years in countries such as Australia, Norway, Mexico, Chile, South Africa and Italy. The themes of these events have varied throughout the years. For instance, the most recent colloquium in Palermo, Italy focused on the effects of migration on crime prevention.

Given the significant span of existing policies and programs, as well as the variety of actors involved, these events are necessary to ensure the sharing of knowledge within the field of crime prevention. ICPC’s Colloquiums offer a space for debate and dialogue between international experts, fostering innovative ideas and the formation of partnerships that will increase the effects of crime prevention as a tool for social improvement.

The title of this year’s Colloquium is “Crime Prevention Strategies in the 21st Century: Evolving practices and policies”. As such, it will focus on the evolution of the role of crime prevention actors as well as the challenges related to coordination and collaboration between governments. This theme will allow the colloquium’s participants to share their perspectives on important subjects, such as the different issues that affect crime prevention in different global regions, financial challenges in the field, or the need for strategies that are adapted to local urban settings.

AUDIENCE AND IMPACT

The Colloquium is currently expecting more than 200 attendees from around the world. Among these are government representatives from Public Safety Canada and the government of Quebec, as well as representatives from other Ministries at the federal, provincial and territorial levels. Officials of all levels from other countries will also be present. The list of attendees also includes renowned experts in crime prevention research, practitioners in the field of crime prevention, as well as representatives of international institutions and organizations. Among these institutions are the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), the United Nations Human Settlements Program (UN-Habitat), UN Women, as well as member institutions of the Programme Network Institutes (PNI), which ICPC is part of and whose mission is to assist the United Nations in Criminal Justice and Crime Prevention Affairs. The
The colloquium will also be a unique and accessible opportunity for various Canadian participants to attend an international high-level event.

Several organizations would like to take advantage of this opportunity to organize side events. Public Safety Canada will be holding its Federal-Provincial-Territorial meeting on security. UN Agencies such as UNODC, UN-Habitat and UN Women will be participating in the Colloquium presenting a variety of initiatives tools and networks that support multi stakeholders to implement multiple SDGs and the New Urban Agenda in relation to safety, and the prevention of crime and violence, including data collection and monitoring, and the design and implementation of comprehensive programmes to prevent and respond to violence against women, and other urban safety initiatives.

The presence of such a vast variety of attendees will ensure a rich exchange of knowledge and ideas during the Colloquium. This will in turn encourage collaboration of a multiplicity of actors in the field, which is crucial to the successful development of appropriate crime prevention measures.

Several field visits could be organized on the side of the Colloquium, for example on:

- The initiatives of the City of Montreal;
- The operating procedures of the Montreal Police Department (SPVM) and the Sûreté du Québec (SQ);
- The community organizations in Montreal.

As a result, during the Colloquium, the City of Montreal and the Province of Quebec will be at the centre of the global debate on crime and violence prevention.

Opening Plenary

EVOLUTION OF CRIME PREVENTION: NEW ACTORS, TRENDS AND PRIORITIES

Nowadays, safety is becoming an increasingly complex phenomenon as a result not only of evolving crime, but also of the variety of actors it involves. Safety is no longer the sole responsibility of police or government, but a constructed phenomenon developed by multiple actors: police and government, of course, but also civil society, communities, private actors, etc. As a result, we often speak of the co-creation of safety, or the nodal governance of safety.

As the introductory plenary to the colloquium, this first plenary will set the stage by introducing new challenges facing crime prevention as well as the evolving role and relationships of traditional and new crime prevention actors as well as trends, priorities, and new challenges facing crime prevention.

- Moderator: Ms. Margaret Shaw, Consultant and former Director of Analysis and Exchange, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
- Presenters:
  - Mr. Pablo Madriaza, Director, Research and Programmes, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime, Canada
  - Mr. Johannes De Haan, Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Officer, United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), Austria
  - Mr. David Farrington, Emeritus Professor of Psychological Criminology, Cambridge University, United Kingdom
  - Ms. Lucie Léonard, Chief, Research and Knowledge, Public Safety Canada, Canada

Concurrent Workshop Sessions (3 sessions)

Workshop 1

PREVENTING GENDER-BASED CRIME AND VIOLENCE

Violence against women has become a major international public concern since the 1970s. The advancement of women’s rights has brought increased awareness of gender inequalities and recognition of forms of violence which disproportionately affect women. The social norms that allow men power and control over women, now generally categorized as gender-based violence, have been the object of significant legislation and policies to ensure women’s security in private and public spaces in many countries. However, challenges remain since many of these efforts have focused on the criminal justice system and victim services while concerted efforts need to be taken to establish robust prevention initiatives. This workshop will explore the gendered dimension of crime and violence, as well as promising approaches, developments, and practices that address both gender-based crime and violence and larger issues such as the promotion of gender equality.

- Moderator: Ms. Kathryn Travers, Executive Director, Women and Cities International (WICI), Canada
- Presenters:
  - Ms. Beth Ulrich, Executive Director, Manitoba Status of Women, Canada
  - Ms. Raphaëlle Rafin, Programme Manager, UN Women Maghreb, Morocco
  - Ms. Laura Capobianco, Senior Policy Specialist on Safe Public Spaces, UN Women, USA
  - Ms. Emy Yanni, Initiatives Manager, CARE Egypt, Egypt
Cities and the Local Context in Crime Prevention

In an ever-globalizing world, cities are progressively taking on greater importance and autonomy in relation to central governments. Many of them, as we see throughout this report, not only develop different strategies to those at the national level, but also use strategies that openly oppose the policies implemented by their national governments. This growing autonomy presents us with an opportunity to rethink the role cities and local actors play in relation to crime prevention, and how to conceive safety in a world dominated by recent urbanization, which will be the focus of this workshop.

- Moderator: Ms. Agathe Lalande, Division Chief, Combatting Poverty and Homelessness, City of Montreal, Canada
- Presenters:
  - Mr. Juma Assiago, Global Coordinator/Lead, Safer Cities Programme, UN-Habitat, Kenya
  - Mr. Félix Munger and Mr. Patrice Allard, Managing Consultant and Co-President, Canadian Municipal Network on Crime Prevention (CMNCP), Canada
  - Mr. Michel-Max Raynaud, Associate Professor, Réseau d'échanges stratégiques pour une Afrique urbaine durable (RESAUD), University of Montreal, Canada

Mobilizing the Civil Society to Prevent Crime

The increasing involvement of civil society actors and communities in crime prevention entails specific challenges in relation to their role and how their efforts can be coordinated with those of other crime prevention stakeholders. This workshop will be an opportunity to assess how non-governmental local actors can be involved in crime prevention and how to ensure their effective participation in crime prevention initiatives.

- Moderator: Mr. René-André Brisebois, Researcher and Practitioner, Centre jeunesse de Montréal-Institut universitaire, Canada
- Presenters:
  - Ms. Cecilia García, Director General, Despierta, Cuestiona y Actúa, A.C., Mexico
  - Mr. Fady Dagher, Chief of Police of the Longueuil Agglomeration, Canada
  - Mr. Vincenzo Castelli, President, Consorzio Nova Onlus, Italy

THE CONSTRUCTION OF SAFETY: A CROSSROAD BETWEEN THE PUBLIC AND PRIVATE SECTORS

In recent years, more and more companies have sought new ways to contribute to citizens’ wellbeing and quality of life. We are witnessing a growth in the engagement of the private sector in actions addressing social problems and ways of contributing to the development of communities, cities and countries. Safety has been a central focus of many public-private partnerships, suggesting a formal collaboration between public sector agencies (i.e. government), the civil society and the private sector, aimed at dealing with rising crime and violence in expanding urban areas worldwide. The private sector is in a unique position to contribute to crime prevention, and therefore this workshop will provide the opportunity to highlight innovative partnerships from around the world, and to debate the value and limitations of such participation.

- Moderator:
- Presenters:
  - Mr. Claude Sarrazin, Founding President SIRCO (Investigation and Protection), Canada
  - Mr. Matthew Swarney, Director, Government Affairs at Motorola Solutions Canada, Canada
  - Ms. Jaymin Kim, Manager, MaRS Centre for Impact Investing, Canada

PRACTICES, NORMS AND STANDARDS IN THE OBSERVATION OF CRIME

Recent years have witnessed the development of observatories of crime, violence and delinquency, as well as advances in human rights and other issues relating to community safety. Through the use of advanced tools and methods, these observatories have facilitated data compilation and analysis which has enabled via multiple sources the exploration of the various phenomena associated with insecurity. These tools have allowed the deployment of strategies to confront and prevent crime. However, international norms and standards in crime observation and analysis have yet to be adopted. This workshop will be an opportunity to assess progress in developing such norms and standards.

- Moderator: Mr. Serge Bruneau, Consultant and former Director of Programmes, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
- Presenters:
  - Mr. Pier Alexandre Lemaire, Analyst and Project Officer, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
  - Ms. Isabelle Gally, Head, Department of Transport Safety, Ministère de l’Ecologie, du Développement durable et de l’Énergie (Ministry of Ecology, Sustainable Development and Energy) France
  - Ms. Karen Bozicovich, Section Chief, Public Security, Information and Knowledge, Organization of American States (OAS), USA
  - Mr. Jean-Luc Besson, Head of Geostatistical Studies, Observatoire national de la délinquance et des réponses pénales (ONDRP- National Observatory of Delinquency and Criminal Responses), France

NEW ASSESSMENT METHODS AND PRACTICES

The evaluation of policies, strategies, and action in the field of crime prevention and community safety, notably the evaluation of their effects, impacts, and cost-effectiveness, has been the subject of considerable interest for several years. A basic principle underpinning modern crime prevention is that it requires the practical application of research and evaluation findings in the development and implementation of strategies to reduce crime. Evaluation is therefore an important prerequisite for effective crime prevention. This workshop will focus more specifically on new and innovative methods to evaluate the success of a crime prevention program, strategy, or policy.

- Moderator: Mr. Daniel Sansfaçon, Sociologist and Criminologist, Canada
- Presenters:
  - Ms. Ariane de Palacio, Analyst and Project Officer, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
  - Mr. Irvin Waller, Professor of Criminology, University of Ottawa, Canada

MANAGEMENT AND SHARING OF INFORMATION: A KEY FACTOR FOR PREVENTION

This plenary will examine the complexity of information production, management and dissemination in relation to crime prevention. Particularly, three main dimensions will be considered. First, quality data is crucial and can be found in a variety of sources, which often provide complementary information and can help enhance and complete existing knowledge. Second, there is a diversity of information systems and data collection methods, which may be used in conjunction. Third, coordination is key in order to ensure the availability and circulation of knowledge: this implies an integration of the different scales of information production and use.

- Moderator: Ms. Chantal Bernier, President, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
- Presenters:
  - Mr. Jeffrey Forde, Director of Operations and Plans, Regional Security System (RSS), Barbados
  - Mr. Dale McFee, Deputy Minister Responsible for Corrections and Policing, Saskatchewan, Canada
  - Mr. David Thorne, Business Development Leader, Public Safety Practice, MNP, Canada

In 2010, the fifth Conference of Parties to the United Nations Convention on Transnational Organized Crime have recognised cybercrime, identity-related crimes, trafficking of cultural property, environmental crime, piracy, organ trafficking, and fraudulent medicine as new and emerging crimes of concern to the global agenda. The appearance of these types of new criminal activity implies changes in law enforcement, as well as changes in states’ responses with the need to adapt their effort and capacities and adopt preventive measures. This plenary session will provide the opportunity to analyse these emerging types of criminality and reflect upon their prevention.

Workshop 7: Cybercrime: A Major Safety Challenge at the Global Level

Since the 90s, the traditional crime rate has tended to fall steadily in developed countries. For some, this decline does not correspond to an actual reduction in crime, but rather its transformation into new forms, especially cybercrime. The rise of cybercriminal attacks in the past few years, the incidence of these types of crime in daily life and the increasing costs associated to cybercrime in different countries demonstrate the necessity to develop new preventive methods and tools. This workshop will be dedicated to the topic of cybercrime and its prevention.

- Moderator: Mr. Claude Sarrazin, Founding President SIRCO (Investigation and Protection), Canada
- Presenters:
  - Ms. Masarah Paquet-Clouston, Security Researcher, GoSecure, Canada
  - Mr. Paul Laurier, VP Technologies, Artemis Renseignement inc., Canada
  - Ms. Isabelle Ouellet-Morin, Researcher and Assistant Professor, Institut universitaire en santé mentale de Montréal, Canada

Workshop 8: Radicalization Leading to Violence: Is Prevention Possible?

Over the past decade, violent radicalization processes have become a constant preoccupation, especially in developed countries. The traditional intervention approach has focused on intelligence agencies and criminal justice mechanisms. However, the current debate has gradually emphasized the importance of prevention, particularly at the social level. Thus, many governments now have national and local programmes for the prevention of radicalization, which include intersectoral mechanisms used by police, social services and the community. This workshop will focus on new developments and challenges of programmes and approaches to preventing radicalization.

- Moderator: Mr. David Morin, Assistant Professor, School of Applied Politics, University of Sherbrooke, Canada
- Presenters:
  - Liam Stock-Rabbat, Analyst and Project Officer, International Centre for the Prevention of Crime (ICPC), Canada
  - Mr. Brett Kubic, Manager of Research for the Canada Centre for Community Engagement and Prevention of Violence, Public Safety Canada, Canada
  - Mr. Amarnath Amarasingam, Senior Research Fellow, Institute for Strategic Dialogue (ISD), Canada

This workshop will assess how rapidly evolving tools and technologies, as well as traditional tools adapted to current times, can be used to contribute to crime prevention and improve safety, for instance georeferencing technologies and social networks.

  - Ms. Mélanie Bania, Consultant, Community-Based Research and Evaluation, Canada

<td>Public transport is a hotspot in urban areas. Although expansion of public transportation is vital to cities, this expansion also increases the likelihood that problems related to urbanization, including crime, will occur: theft, sexual abuse, mass murder, terrorist acts, etc. Crime in transport, although similar to that of the rest of the city, is tainted by the mobility of transport systems. As a result, prevention strategies adapted to a unique and mobile context need to be developed. Despite this necessity, criminality and the feeling of insecurity in public transport are among the least studied phenomena on a global scale. This workshop aims to present a range of prevention experiences from the private and public sectors to address this gap.</td>

Closing Plenary

Coordination, Collaboration and Integration: The Major Challenges of the 21st Century

Coordination and collaboration have been identified as among the main global challenges in crime prevention and ensuring safety. Improving coordination between stakeholders, information and knowledge sharing as well as coordination between actions is believed to have a positive impact on preventing crime. A lack of coordination has indeed been identified as a key factor that can lead to the failure of prevention programmes and strategies.

This plenary session will provide the opportunity to discuss the main coordination challenges when implementing crime prevention strategies or programmes either horizontally (between various actors at the local level) and vertically (between various levels of government) and how to effectively integrate and build partnerships between the diversity of actors involved in crime prevention.

Carole Lalonde
Inspector for the Montreal Police Service
Chief of the Metro Section, SPVM
Canada

Carole Lalonde has been Chief of the SPVM’s metro and canine squad section since January 2016. Previously, she held the position of Chief of the Unit for community relations section for the Police Stations 46 in Anjou, 27 in Ahuntsic and 40 in Montréal Nord. She began her career 31 years ago at the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) and her passage through the different units of the Montreal Police Service was marked by her sustained interest in serving Montrealers. Her strength lies in establishing effective partnerships and the creation of communities of interest, to better understand the problems that involve public safety in large cities like Montreal. Among her achievements, let’s note the formation of communities of interest on sexual exploitation, the emergence of street gang, homelessness, radicalization and more recently, security in public transport, with a community of interest focusing on sexual misconduct in the Montreal metro. Mrs. Lalonde, in addition to her training in the Canadian Gendarmerie and the SPVM, has a university degree from the University of Montreal in management applied to police and criminology. Her interest in serving the public is rooted in her capacity to mobilize staff through a sense of team work. She claims that the understanding of social issues and the sharing of responsibilities between different actors of a community can lead to great results. She is convinced that this is how the units she has directed were effective.

Irvin Waller
Professor of Criminology
University of Ottawa
Canada

Irvin Waller is an internationally influential author and speaker, Professor of Criminology, and President of the International Organization for Victim Assistance (in consultative status with ECOSOC). He won awards in the USA and internationally for his contributions to the UN General Assembly resolution that adopted the Declaration on Principles of Justice for Victims in 1985. His work to use evidence and best practice to stop victimization – the ultimate victim right - has won recognition across the world, particularly for his role as the founding executive director of the International Centre for Prevention of Crime, affiliated with the UN. He has advised the governments of more than 50 countries in both the advanced and developing world, including that of Mandela. He worked on task forces in Canada, South Africa and the USA. His recent book on Smarter Crime Control is a guide to politicians on how to invest in effective crime prevention. The book is already in Spanish and soon Chinese. It is the third in a popular trilogy of books in Chinese, Spanish and other languages that use the accumulated evidence and best practices to show policy makers how they can invest in people and avoid misspending so that they sustainably prevent violence, stop thousands of needless deaths, and avoid billions in harm to victims.
